Debilitated D gestion. In the "Memoirs of Count Segur" In the "Memoirs of Count Segur" there is the following anecdote: "My mother, the Countess De Segur, being asked by Voltaire respecting her health, told him that the most painful feeling she had arose from the decay of her stomach and the difficulty of finding any kind of ailment that it could bear. Voltaire, by way of consolation, assured her taire, by way of consolation, assured her that he was once for nearly a year in the same state, and believed to be incurable, but that, nevertheless, a very simple remedy had restored him. It consisted in taking no other nourishment than the yelks of eggs beaten up with the flour of potatoes and water." Though this circumstance took place as far back as fifty years ago, and respected so exyears ago, and respected so extraordinary person as Voltaire, it is astonishing how little is known and how rarely the remedy has been practiced. Its efficacy, however, in cases of debility, cannot be questioned, and the following cannot be questioned, and the following is the mode of preparing this valuable article of food as recommended by Sir John Sinclair: "Best up an egg in a bowl and then add six tablespoonsful of cold water, mixing the whole well together, then add two tablespoonsful of farina of potatoes; let it be mixed thoroughly with the liquor in the bowl. Then pour in as much boiling water as will convert the whole into a jelly and mix it well. It may be taken alone or mix it well. It may be taken alone or with the addition of a little milk, in case of stomachic debility or consumptive dis-orders. This dish is light and easily digested, extremely wholesame and nour-ishing. Bread or biscuit may be taken with it as the stomach gets stronger."

Italian Carnivals.

NO. 23.

The carnival at Nice was opened by that charming and graceful tournament known as the bataille des fleurs. The bataille des fleures is principally carried on between the occupants of the carriages who pelt each other as they pass with such missiles as violets, forget-mewith such missiles as violets, forget-menots, camelias, heliotropes, hyacinths, etc., done up into bouquets of various sizes; some of these bouquets are of microscopic dimensions while others are of such handsome proportions that they cannot and are not intended to be thrown but are, after a preliminary skirmish with the smaller ones, sent by a footman and presented to your whilom foe as a mark of your courtesy and amiability.

It is customary before beginning an assault to bow to those you have chosen as your opponents, and hold up your flowers as if you were to throw them; this is the provocation. If they happen to be acquaintances or friends a perfect rain of bonguets is showered about your rain of bouquets is showered about your face and ears, and before you have time to recover from this torrential shower of oses and camelias and attack in your turn, the enemy is carried off by the perpetually moving stream of carriages, and is beyond the reach of reprisals, while opposite you is a fresh batch of ardent and eager assailants, and you are engaged in a merry combat of offense and defense, the charm of which is enhanced by the saucy laughter and charming ows they bestow on you as they are liding out of sight.

Among the curious and interesting eatures of this fete must figure the 'gamins," who follow in the wake of the carriages, darting and diving under the horses hoofs and wheels, at the imminent risk of life and limb, to pick up fallen bouquets, not to give them to those for whom they were originally intended, but to resell to those ill-supplied or reckless persons whose stock of flowers has run out, and who, warmed by the strife and eager to continue it, must have more flowers at any price. In the early stage of the battle the urchins will not part with their spoils for less than six, seven and eight francs the "pannier," but as time goes on the prices are lowered with astonishing rapidity; about five o'clock you can half ill your carriage with flowers for two rancs; half an hour later the "gamins" will cluster and clamor round you mak-ing frantic appeals for bids for the modest sums of fifty, thirty, or even twenty centimes, a pile of mutilated, limp and dust-covered bouquets are laid finale. The short twilight of the South is rapidly disappearing before the darker shades of night; balconies, terraces and windows are almost deserted; the crowd is dispersing in all directions, and the few remaining carriages are whirling off with their occupants to their respective hotels and villas.

How a Bishop Waltzed.

"That finishes the school commencements at one swoop," sighed the editor, gloomily, as the fair vision floated out. "Can't see how I made that blunder about shadows and roses and friendship. Either I'm getting old or some of these girls have struck out something original. Here, Swipes, tell the foreman to put this slush in the next tax sales' supplement," and the editor felt in his hair for the cork, and wondered what had bappened to his memory.—[Brooklyn Eagle.

The Mormon Church looks with disfavor on the familiarities of certain styles of modern dancing, and the bishops the young and giddler saints. At a dance in Salt Lake recently the bishop expressed himself as highly displeased with round dances. He said that it was condemned by the priesthood, and if the saints could not get along without the factor of crude petroleum, costing about 85 to 90 cents, do the work of a ton of coal, costing from $4$ to $4$ 25, and without the but all to no purpose. "If you must large steamer carrying from 40 to 45 men The young folks remonstrated with him but all to no purpose. "If you must waltz, let me show you how to do it," said he, and he got on the floor with a 183 pound blonde. The band struck up the "Blue Danube," and away they slid. Down the hall glide the bishop and the blonde; the tips of their fingers touch and cruel space between them. This was the Church method—the priestly-improved arm's length waltz. Soon there was a slight contraction of the arms and the space between them gradually decreased. Presently one arm encircled the fair form. The blonde was the first to give way, and her cheek looked like a sunflower in a turnip field as it rested on the fair form of the priest of the past. This conception of sunflower in a turnip field as it rested on the shoulder of the man of God. Bound things is near at hand. and round went they, and the fascinating, weird-like strains floated like heavenly music to his soul. Forgotten was the round dance dogma of the Church, and by the calm smile that stole across his face we knew that theology was defeated and one man at least utterly indifferent to a future punishment.

> of. There is nothing in the world to compare with the glue obtained from quince seed to make those awfully sweet curls, of all sorts of shapes and sizes, which lie upon the marble brow of the girl of the period like a mashed angleworm upon a Philadelphia front-step. Why any girl should want that sort of thing ziggard should want that sort of thing zig-zagged down the edge of her eyes and rolling back around her ears, held to-gether by an invisible net which every-body can see, is quite beyond ordinary comprehension, but nobedy ever expects a girl to give a rea-son for any eccentricity of personal deco-ration. But while the crushed angleworm ornamentation of the feminine forehead is persisted in the demand for quince seeds will continue. These seeds are mostly imported from Russia, and the trade has grown from five hundred the trade has grown from five hundred pounds a year to ten thousand pounds, and the demand is not satisfied with that. They are handled by the druggists, and the prices have gone up so that a great many girls can't afford quince-seed curls, but fall back on gum tragacanth and soap, either of which will serve the purpose very well and create an appropriate degree of ugliness around the the prettiest face.

Wall P. per and Gilding.

A wall paper should never be obtrusive. It is not intended for decoration as many would seem to think, but for the background of deceration; the mirrors, pictures, brackets, cups—these are the decorations; and the wall paper is of finest effect when of no effect at all, and the objects of plastic art stand out from it in strong relief, as from their own canvas. Many people make their wall paper so much a principal subject, make it so observable with its spots and figures and colors, that all paintings and sculptures become merely secondary, and their rooms look incongruous. That unfortunate result will surely be avoided if the same-figured paper, the softly-calendered, the dispered, with its Byzancalendered, the dispered, with its Byzantine suggestions, or the smooth, eventinted, perfectly plain paper be adopted. Gilding, again, is something that should be very sparingly used. The drawing-room is usually the better for a little of it carefully administered, and no other room, except, perhaps, the dining-room. The family sitting-room is cosier and more harmonious without it; its glare is utterly unfit for sleeping-rooms. The common idea holds that when you The common idea holds that when you have secured a gilded paper you can go no farther; but it is seldem that a gilded paper is really a choice one; and it is more frequently hideous in design and effect—in one light comes a blinding dazzle of gold, in another as dark a blot as if the walls were smoother; the effect of the room does not remain the same for five minutes together, and is never the same to two different per-sons.—[Harper's Bazar.

The New Railroad Deal in Georgia.

The action of the Georgia Railroad Board of Directors in leasing their road nominally to the South Carolina Railroad Company, but practically to the Georgia Central, places under one sys-tem thirteen hundred miles of road in Georgia and South Carolina, and was done to protect the South Atlantic ports and railway systems from the encroach-ments of the Richmond and Danville. Savannah and Charleston are now fully covered, and in a short time a new line of steamships will be placed on the Charleston and New York line, similar to those of the Ocean Steamship Company from Savannah, General Alexander, Vice President of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad, fully approves of the lease, which places the great Western railway system in sympathy with his combination. It is rumored that the at your feet, and with these worn-out and soiled veterans you "fight your battles over again." You no longer invite the enemy to cover you with violets and forget-me-nots, but pelt and shelter yourself from attack as well as you can. This is the veritable battle and the finals. The about trailing the same are laid at your battle and the battle and the same are laid at your battle and the same are laid at your feet, and with these worn-out Richmond and Danville is reaching out to buy up the Atlanta and West Point Railway, and the Western Railway of Alabama, which, with the Atlanta and Charlotte Airline, recently acquired, will give it an almost unbroken line from Norfolk to New Orleans. The other day one of Westfield's young lawyers had a case on trial before the local court, and the testimony of the opposition being rather uninteresting and monotonous, he let his thoughts ramble to pleasanter themes.

At any rate, that is a fair supposition, for when the other side was through with the witness, and the voice of the judge spoke the lawyer's name, he opened his half-closed eyes with a sudden start, and ejeculated:

"What did you say, dear?"

The court and witnesses roared, the young limb of the law looked confused, and the jelly judge remarked that it was not in good taste to get the different linds of courting mixed up, though each was good in its place.
